INTRODUCTION

This cumulative volume is the fifteenth in a series of bibliographies of the history of medicine. It includes and supersedes the material contained in the last four annual volumes which preceded it. It also incorporates citations to several thousand articles and monographs which have been indexed since Bibliography Number 14 (1978) was published. This volume indexes mainly publications that were issued from 1975 through 1979, but includes in addition scattered citations to literature back to 1964.

The bibliography is prepared from citations added to the file monthly and stored in the National Library of Medicine's computerized data base in the history of medicine, known as HISTLINE. Detailed online searches of this same material, as well as of the entire history data base, may be made from computer terminals at any of over 1,200 medical schools, hospitals, and universities that have access to NLM's MEDLINE. Further information on making such searches may be obtained from the MEDLARS Management Section, National Library of Medicine, Bethesda, MD 20209.

The Bibliography of the History of Medicine focuses on the history of medicine and its related sciences, professions, and institutions. The general history and philosophy of science have been admitted only sparingly. All chronological periods and geographic areas are covered. Journal articles, monographs, and analytical entries for symposia, congresses, and similar composite publications, as well as historical chapters in general monographs are included.

A substantial proportion of the journal citations in this bibliography have come from the National Library of Medicine's Index Medicus. The Library regularly indexes over 2,500 medical and related serials, the titles of which are given in its List of Journals Indexed in Index Medicus. The journal title abbreviations are those used in Index Medicus or are based upon the same principles. The majority of monographs are from the Current Catalog, which lists all monographs and other works received and catalogued in the National Library of Medicine. Further citations have been obtained by regularly reviewing a select group of additional journals in the history of medicine and science and by scanning bibliographies, abstracts, and lists of recent articles from fields such as classics and general history. Persons using the Bibliography of the History of Medicine as well as HISTLINE should be aware that most of the citations from these nonmedical periodicals are to journals that are not in the National Library of Medicine collections. The presence of these journals should be verified in SERLINE or in the most recent edition of the Index of NLM Serial Titles before they are requested on interlibrary loan.

The bibliography is divided into three main parts: Part I, "Biographies," Part II, "Subjects," and Part III, "Authors." Part I includes citations to works dealing with the medical history of famous nonmedical persons, or with medical aspects of the work of literary figures, composers, artists, etc., as well as those dealing with lives and contributions of physicians, scientists, and others in professions related to health. In Part II, where applicable, the citations under each subject heading are subdivided by chronologic and/or geographic subheadings. The same citation may appear under more than one heading. The subject headings used are based primarily on medical sciences and specialties, diseases, and institutions. In Part III, the citations in Parts I and II are listed alphabetically by author (or by title where there is no author). Cross references are given for co-authors and editors when appropriate.

The Library acknowledges its indebtedness to a number of authors who sent reprints of their publications for inclusion in the bibliography. All authors who wish to insure prompt consideration of articles appearing in journals not indexed in Index Medicus are invited to send reprints including complete citations to the original publications to: Chief, History of Medicine Division, National Library of Medicine.
